COMPOSTING ACTIVITY

Date: 13th November , 2024

Introduction:

The NSS Unit of Lala Lajpatrai College of Commerce and Economics (Autonomous) organized a session on composting activity to educate students about sustainable waste management and environmental conservation. This initiative aimed to promote eco-friendly practices by encouraging participants to convert organic waste into nutrient-rich compost. The session witnessed active participation from NSS volunteers who eagerly learned the techniques and benefits of composting.

Objective:

The primary objective of this composting activity session was to: Educate participants on the importance of composting as a sustainable waste management method. Demonstrate practical steps to create compost using organic waste such as vegetable peels, dried leaves, and food scraps. Promote awareness about reducing landfill waste and enhancing soil fertility through natural compost. Encourage volunteers to adopt composting techniques at home and in their local communities.

Outcome:

The composting session proved to be highly informative and impactful. Volunteers actively participated in the demonstration and understood the process of layering organic waste, maintaining moisture balance, and ensuring proper aeration for effective composting. The session inspired participants to implement composting practices in their households, fostering a sense of responsibility towards the environment. Moreover, volunteers shared their newfound knowledge with peers and family members, contributing to the larger goal of sustainable waste management.
